

EDUCATION FOR NON-CHINESE SPEAKING CHILDREN

In Hong Kong, children between the age of three and six could receive pre-primary education at kindergartens which are privately run. Hong Kong provides nine-year, free and universal basic education for primary to junior secondary levels. Eligible children between the ages of six and fifteen, irrespective of sex, ethnic origin, religion or ethical belief, family status and physical or mental ability, have the right to enjoy basic education in public sector schools. All secondary 3 students in publicly-funded schools who have the ability and wish to continue their study are provided with subsidized secondary 4 and training places and about 18 percent of the relevant age group is able to obtain university education.

The primary and junior secondary (up to Secondary 3) classes in public sector schools are free of charge, the fees for Secondary 4 and 5 are at present HK$5,050 per annum and for Secondary 6 and 7 are HK$8,750 per annum.

The government's language in education policy is to enable students to be biliterate (to master written Chinese and English) and trilingual (to speak fluent Cantonese, Putonghua and English). Chinese is the medium of instruction in most primary and secondary schools, with English taught as a core subject from Primary 1.

Non-Chinese speaking children are encouraged to study in public sector schools so that they could integrate into the community as early as possible. The government also provides support services including Initiation Programme and Induction Programme for newly arrived non-Chinese speaking children to help them adjust to the local education system. All public sector schools can admit eligible non-Chinese speaking children. Enquiry about their eligibility to study in public sector schools in Hong Kong may be made to the schools direct, to the Hong Kong Education and Manpower Bureau through the enquiry hotline at 2891 0088 or to the Regional Education Offices or the Placement and Support Section (addresses and telephone numbers given at the end of this leaflet).

There are a number of schools in the public sector which offer language subject, other than Chinese and English. These include:

Non-Chinese speaking children may also choose to study in schools operated by the English Schools Foundation and some private schools.

THE ENGLISH SCHOOLS FOUNDATION (ESF)

The ESF was established by the Government Ordinance in 1967. It operates at present ten junior schools and five secondary schools for children whose first language is English. The education provided is similar in content and method to that available in schools in the United Kingdom but adapted to the Hong Kong context.

There are no formal entrance examinations to the schools but children are interviewed and usually given a test to make sure that they have a sufficient command of English to benefit from the type of education offered. Admission is subject to places being available and no guarantee of immediate admission can be given.

A zoning system operates for all ESF schools and children are normally expected to attend the school appropriate to their place of residence. It is advisable for parents to contact either the ESF Central Office at 43B Stubbs Road, Hong Kong (Tel : 2818 6332) on or before arrival in Hong Kong, or the school directly (if place of residence is known), to determine the possibilities for the admission of their children. Furthermore, parents of students in Secondary 4 to 7 should seek advice directly from secondary schools on the availability of Public Examination option courses.

The school fees at present are HK$47,300 and HK$78,600 per annum for junior and secondary schools respectively.

The English Schools Foundation (ESF)

Some ESF schools provide special classes or remedial groups for children with mild disabilities, including those with mild physical handicaps, or visual, hearing and speech impairment. The children are normally taught in separate groups by special education teachers for the basic subjects, and are integrated into ordinary class for cultural subjects and general activities whenever possible.

At present there are special classes in Bradbury Junior School on Hong Kong Island, Beacon Hill School and Kowloon Junior School in Kowloon for children of primary school age. Special classes are also provided at King George V School, Kowloon and the South Island School, Hong Kong Island, for pupils of secondary school age.

For children who are severely handicapped, the Jockey Club Sarah Roe School (2B Tin Kwong Road, Kowloon. Tel : 2761 9893) provides a special curriculum geared to their needs.

Before a child is considered for special education provision in ESF schools, assessment by the ESF educational psychologist is required.

Korean International School

The Springboard School Limited, a charitable organization, operates a special education class at the Korean International School for non-Chinese speaking children with special educational needs.

Government Schools

Sir Ellis Kadoorie (Sookunpo) Primary School and Li Cheng Uk Government Primary PM School offer Resource Help Service for local non-Chinese speaking children (mostly Indians and Pakistanis) with mild disabilities. Children with severe learning difficulties are placed in the Intensive Remedial Teaching Programme in primary schools which provide intensive remedial teaching in core subjects. The local non-Chinese speaking children from these schools are placed through Secondary School Places Allocation to secondary schools which usually provide School-based Remedial Support Programmes to students with mild learning difficulties.
