Underlying Principles

1. Language development strategies, generic skills, and positive values and attitudes are essential to English Language learning and form an integral part of the learning-teaching-assessment cycle.
2. Learners are exposed to a variety of text types and reading purposes (e.g. reading for academic development, reading for pleasure) in preparation for real life applications.
3. Selection of a wide range of texts of appropriate lengths and different topics, including authentic texts, is crucial to the development of reading skills and strategies (e.g. scanning for specific information, skimming for gist, using contextual clues) as well as learners' awareness of different cultures.
4. The interplay between tasks and texts is a factor for consideration when teachers design a range of tasks for learners to demonstrate their understanding of the texts. In principle, task demand increases with text complexity as learners progress in the development of reading skills and strategies. To cater for learner diversity, simple tasks can be included for complex texts to cultivate learners' confidence, and difficult tasks for simple texts to stretch their abilities.
5. Teacher support is essential to helping learners understand the text and demonstrate their understanding during the learning and teaching process. Teachers are also expected to help learners activate their prior knowledge and experiences in the process of interacting with the text. As learners progress, the amount of support provided is gradually reduced to promote learner independence.

The reading strategies included in some of the pointers provide examples on how these strategies can help learners construct meaning and interpret texts. They are by no means exhaustive or prescriptive. They serve as reference for teachers in planning and developing tasks for the learning-teaching-assessment cycle.
