2.3 The textbook should be written in line with the aims and objectives of the SS Economics curriculum and should help users to adopt a wide range of learning and teaching strategies, such as direct instruction, enquiry and co-construction of knowledge. Moreover, it should facilitate the acquisition of knowledge, development of skills and formation of proper values and attitudes in students.

3. Guiding Principles

3.1 Content

- The writing of the textbooks should be in line with the curriculum aims and objectives stated in the Economics Curriculum and Assessment Guide (Secondary 4-6) (2007) (updated as at November 2015), and should realise the related learning elements recommended in the Curriculum Framework of National Security Education in Hong Kong (2021).
- The content should cover all topics in the Compulsory Part and Elective Part in the curriculum.
- The content should be complete, up-to-date, objective and impartial. Information and data must be accurate and relevant to the content. The sources of the data and information (and the dates of retrieving it, if applicable) should also be stated clearly for users' reference.
- Concepts and theories must be correct and precise. They should be discussed and elaborated to the appropriate level, and linked with students' experience as far as possible. The examples and cases chosen should be interesting, authentic, and should be familiar and comprehensible to students.

- Illustrations such as graphs, tables and pictures must be accurate, appropriate and suitably annotated to stimulate and facilitate learning.
- To encourage and facilitate students to read larger amounts of materials on their own, selected further reading lists could be included to let students read extensively. An index could also be included to make easy reference.

3.2 Learning and Teaching

- Learning tasks, activities and exercises should be designed for a variety of learning situations – recapitulation, decision-making, problem-solving, identifying economic problem(s) from social phenomena / issues, applying economic concepts and theories to analyse economic issues, evaluating arguments, proposals and policies from different perspectives and making informed judgments, etc.
- Formats and foci of learning tasks and assessments should be diversified. The knowledge constructed, integrated use of skills and proper values and attitudes developed and / or assessed through these tasks and exercises should be in line with the curriculum aims and objectives, and should be extended beyond the requirements of public examination.
- Learning tasks and exercises of different levels of difficulty should be provided to cater for learner diversity. Appropriate support should also be provided to guide students to master the concepts and knowledge.
- Classroom and students' activities such as discussion, debate, role-play, simulation game, project work, survey, case study, information collection, essay writing, etc. could also be included as part of the exercises.
- The introduction of broad questions without the provision of sufficient information and guidelines should also be avoided, so as not to exceed the capability of students in terms of their prior knowledge, and deviate from the curriculum objectives.
- There should be tasks designed for students to help them prepare for learning a topic, such as pre-reading of an article or information / data collection related to certain economic issues. Tasks should also be suggested for students' independent learning and further enquiry.
- There should also be tasks and guidelines to help students progressively develop skills of communicating economic ideas in verbal, numerical and graphical forms and making informed judgements or decisions in a clear, logical and appropriate way.
- Stimulus materials in the form of newspaper cuttings, extracts from articles, cartoons, flow-charts, photos, diagrams, statistical tables or graphs, etc. should be provided so that students can have some concrete materials to base on as well as motivation for learning.

3.3 Structure and Organisation

- The organisation of content should take students' prior knowledge and readiness into consideration. The content sequence should be appropriate. New concepts should be built on old ones and should be introduced when and where appropriate.

3.4 Language

- The language used should be precise, fluent, accurate and easy to understand. The level of language complexity used should match with the cognitive development and language ability of the students.
- For textbooks in English, it is undesirable for texts to include translation of terms in parentheses. This practice should be avoided as far as possible and the terms should be restricted to the “glossary section” in the textbooks or at the footer of the respective page.
- Pinyin should be adopted for Chinese names and places.
- *An English-Chinese Glossary of Terms Commonly Used in the Teaching of Economics in Secondary Schools* (2020) developed by the EDB should be referred to where applicable. Where appropriate, guidance on pronunciation could be provided to facilitate student learning.

3.5 Textbook Layout

- To help reduce the weight of textbooks, lightweight paper should be used. Textbooks can be separated into a few thin volumes, or printed in separate modules.
- The design should have had considered the reuse of the textbooks. (For example, materials for one-off use or a design allowing pages to be torn off from the textbook should be avoided as far as possible.)
- The font type is one that is commonly used. The font type and font size should be consistent throughout the textbooks.
- Publishers may refer to the latest edition of EDB's *Guiding Principles for Printing of Textbooks* for suggestion on use of paper, colouring, use of inks, etc.

4. Others

- 4.1 When writing textbooks, publishers have to ensure that the content and information provided in the materials should be correct, complete, up-to-date, objective and impartial. The source and the date of the information should be provided as appropriate. The information in the illustrations and images should avoid showing the brand-names of the commercial items unless they are necessary.

- 4.2 Except for the single URL of the publisher's website, no other URLs or QR codes should be included in the printed textbooks. Publishers are required to clearly declare in the "Preface" or "Editor's Notes" that the learning and teaching resources on the publisher's website have not been reviewed by the EDB.
- 4.3 Publishers may provide self-developed supplementary learning materials or the web links to the learning and teaching resources developed by the third party on the publishers' websites. Publishers may also provide their websites' URLs in the Teacher's Book for teachers' reference to facilitate lesson preparation or design of learning and teaching activities. Publishers should be accountable for the learning and teaching resources they provide.
- 4.4 The maps included in the textbooks should be accurate and only contain essential information suitable for student learning. Reference should be made to the requirements and standard maps of the Ministry of Natural Resources of the People's Republic of China for all maps of China included in the textbooks, and wherever appropriate, the respective map review numbers and dates of reference should be quoted. Textbook publishers should also follow strictly the instructions in "公開地圖內容表示規範" issued by the Ministry of Natural Resources.

- 4.6 It is mandatory for the publishers to ensure that all proof-reading work, including that for language, punctuation, information, illustration, pagination, etc., is completed and the textbooks are error-free before submitting them for review.
- 4.7 Publishers should review the textbook content from time to time. When necessary, publishers can make amendments to the printed textbook content in the form of corrigenda with the EDB's consent. The EDB may also require publishers to make amendments when needs arise.
- 4.8 Publishers should clear all copyright issues of the textbooks as appropriate.
- 4.9 Expiration of the copyright on the textbook materials is not accepted as a reason for publishers to apply for textbook revision or "Reprint with Minor Amendments".

- 4.10 The suggested time allocation set out in the curriculum documents should be taken into consideration to ensure that the learning content is designed with an appropriate quantity and level.
- 4.11 If publishers submit other versions (such as Chinese version or electronic version) of the same textbook title for review at the same time, they should duly check the consistency of the content among all the versions. If another version is to be submitted at a later stage, the suggestions in the Textbook Review Reports for the previously submitted version should be duly followed before submission.
